Eagle Scout Presentation to Bangor VFW

Menhennit's project is located at the Bangor park at the top of the hill overlooking the baseball field.

The beautiful Stone pavilion has a concrete floor, four field stone pillars, three metal benches, covered roof and a stone walkway all replacing the old wooden structure badly in need of repair. I think it's the best seat in the park to watch a Little League game.

Post member Gene Tragiani presented Menhennit with a certificate for the all his hard work to complete the project and said "behind every Eagle Scout are supporting parents" referring to Menhennit's parents Tom and Nannette who were in the audience.

New Wild Plant Regulations Now in Place in Pennsylvania

By Christina Novak

Harrisburg, PA - Department of Conservation and Natural Resources Secretary Cindy Adams Dunn today announced that new regulations that apply to the conservation of native wild plants in Pennsylvania are now final.

After a public comment and approval process taking place over more than a year, the final regulations were published in the Pennsylvania Bulletin on Dec. 22, 2018.

"There are many more species of plants in the world than there are animals, and the mission of DCNR's Bureau of Forestry includes conserving native wild plants" Dunn said. "Pennsylvania is home to about 3,000 plant species -- about two-thirds of those are considered native to the commonwealth, and 347 of them are currently considered rare, threatened, or endangered."

Pennsylvania's wild plant classifications includes rare, threatened and endangered, as well as others such as vulnerable, extirpated, tentatively undetermined and special population.

The updates to the list include:

- Nine plants were added
- Nine plants moved from a lower classification to a higher one
- Two plants were downgraded
- Thirty-one plants were removed from the list
- Scientific names were changed for 79 species

The department will continue working to maintain an updated list of classified plants in Pennsylvania by obtaining scientific information and classification recommendations from the public and experts across the state.

For more information, visit the DCNR website, choose "Conservation."
