Match Day

"Our four-year SELECT program is truly unique among medical school programs," said Robert Barraco, MD, Associate Dean for Educational Affairs of the Lehigh Valley Campus of USF Health Morsani College of Medicine and LVHN's Chief Academic Officer. "Our partnership with the USF Health Morsani College of Medicine means that students get two years of classroom learning at one of the country's most progressive medical schools – and the region's highest ranked medical school – and two years of clinical experience right here, at one of the nation's top health care systems.

"This partnership allows our students to learn from, and be mentored by, some of the top minds in medical education. They are qualified to now go out and teach the world what it means to care for others and to be leaders who will shape the future of health care."

Match Day is a much-anticipated national event for graduating medical students. The process: Fourth-year medical students apply to residency programs and attend personal interviews with prospective health organizations. After completing the interview phase, students submit a rank order list (ROL) of their preferred training programs to the National Resident Matching Program. Residency program directors also submit an ROL of their preferred students. A database aggregates the lists to come up with residency assignments that shape the careers of future medical doctors.
