"We provide a developmentally appropriate and safe environment for children of all ages to excel and grow. We provide excellent services in early child care and education.

We believe that all children deserve an equal opportunity to learn and develop to their greatest potential. Children learn in a positive nurturing environment and children should be exposed to a stimulating environment that provides experiences which encourage them to solve problems" said Nicholas. Representative Marcia Hahn and Brian Fenstermaker from Senator Scavello's office attended the event and presented Nicholas with a plaque from the Senate and the House for bringing economic development to the Slate Belt.

They are also a Star 2 Center! You can contact them at 610-863-5177 for a personal tour or Email:kidscampus202@gmail.com and visit them on Facebook.

Penn State Extension Offers Spotted Lanternfly Permit Training Workshop

By Emily Reid

NAZARETH - Penn State Extension, in conjunction with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, will hold a live-streamed Spotted Lanternfly Permit Training workshop from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. Thursday, April 25, at the Gracedale Nursing Home Tower One Conference Room (2 Gracedale Avenue Nazareth, Pennsylvania 18064).

Spotted lanternfly is an invasive insect from Asia that was discovered in Berks County in 2014. This pest has the potential to cause considerable damage to Pennsylvania's agricultural industry.

To help contain the spread of the spotted lanternfly, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture has identified a 14-county quarantine zone and is requiring businesses, agencies and organizations that move vehicles, equipment and goods within and out of the quarantined area to obtain a permit.

The Spotted Lanternfly Permit Training for Businesses is designed as a "train the trainer" course for designated employees. Once employees successfully pass the course exam, their companies will receive spotted lanternfly permits for company vehicles from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. Employees then also will be responsible for training fellow employees to work in the quarantine zone without inadvertently spreading these insects and endangering agriculture and commerce.

There is no cost to register, and although it is not required, registration it is encouraged. Walk-ins are welcome, but registered participants will receive preference if location capacity is met. Registration is available online at <https://extension.psu.edu/spotted-lanternfly-permit-training-for-businesses> or by calling 1-877-345-0691.

Supporting PA First Responders

By State Rep. Joe Emrick

BANGOR - With fire and emergency medical service organizations across the state struggling due to a lack of volunteers and financial resources, the House and Senate Veterans Affairs and Emergency Preparedness committees held an informational meeting to discuss recommendations put forth late last year to address these challenges.

According to testimony offered at the meeting, the decline of volunteers in fire and EMS services across the state is having a significant impact on municipalities' ability to reliably and safely provide public safety services to their citizens.

Much of the decline in volunteers can be attributed to societal and economic changes, such as longer working hours and longer commutes. However, lawmakers were encouraged to consider incentives such as tax credits or college loan forgiveness programs to help recruit new volunteers. Affordable and accessible training was also encouraged as a way to remove barriers to volunteering.

These were among more than two dozen broad recommendations offered by the Senate Resolution 6 Commission, which was charged with studying issues such as recruitment and retention, government support, innovation, training and operations, and more.

One of the report's recommendations, which requires insurers to reimburse ambulance companies for services provided even if no transport takes place, was signed into law last year. Lawmakers plan to build on that success this year as they prepare to introduce legislation implementing some additional recommendations.

2020 Census Hiring Thousands of Workers

By Michael Ortoski

HARRISBURG, Pa. -- The 2020 Census Day is April 1 of next year, but opportunities are opening up now to help ensure the count is a success. The Census Bureau is charged with counting every person living in the United States once each decade. It's a massive undertaking with important consequences, including distribution of federal funds and drawing congressional district lines. (contd.) Senate Approves Bill to Update State's History Code

By Senator Mario Scavello

PEN ARGYL - This week legislation that I co-sponsored with Senator Joe Scarnati passed unanimously out of the PA Senate – a bill which makes many key updates to the state's History Code.

Preservation of historical items, properties such as buildings, landscapes and other components of historical significance is essential. Pennsylvania has a rich and vibrant history and we must do all we can to ensure that our heritage is preserved for future generations. SB 372 provides for a number of technical updates, including measures that increase access to public records and update definitions within the Code.
