Paul Miller's Law: A Victory for Public Safety, 12 Years in the Making

By Senator Rosemary Brown

This week, I stood alongside Secretary Mike Carroll of the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation (PennDOT), public safety advocates, and the Miller family to recognize the enactment of Paul Miller's Law—Act 18 of 2024, which officially takes effect on June 5.

As the prime sponsor of this legislation, it was incredibly meaningful to stand with those who helped make this moment possible. The new law prohibits drivers from holding or supporting a phone or electronic device while driving, allowing only hands-free use. It's a commonsense, life-saving measure that will help reduce distracted driving and protect lives on Pennsylvania roads.

This legislation took 12 years to get across the finish line—a reminder of the power of perseverance and what we can achieve when we prioritize public safety. The road was long, but the outcome is one that will save lives and honor the memory of Paul Miller Jr.

Bill to Increase Firefighters in PA Receives Senate Support

By Senator Rosemary Brown

Pennsylvania relies on volunteer firefighters, but their numbers are dropping – from 300,000 in the 1970s to fewer than 38,000 today. To help ensure there are enough firefighters to respond to a crisis, the Senate passed a bill that would reform the process for people earning their firefighter certification.

Senate Bill 90 would maintain the high standards to become a firefighter while making it less intimidating for men and women who are interested in serving their communities as volunteer firefighters. Currently, firefighter applicants must complete four training modules totaling 188 hours. They then must pass a cumulative test covering all four modules. The bill would allow them to be tested following each of the four modules.

Senate Bill 90 heads to the House of Representatives for further consideration.
