House Liquor Control Committee Tour

Last week, my fellow House Liquor Control Committee members and I convened for a tour of several alcohol production facilities in our Commonwealth to better understand their daily operations and address key challenges the industry faces, including burdensome taxes and regulations.

We began our journey in Breinigsville with a tour of the Samuel Adams Brewery, followed by a stop at Triple Sun Distillery in Emmaus. We then continued to Yergey Brewing before concluding the day with a delicious dinner at Iron Hill Brewery in Allentown. At each location, my fellow committee members and I engaged with the hard-working employees who shared valuable insights into their brewing and distilling processes.

The Liquor Control Committee handles legislation related to the manufacturing and sale of alcohol in the state through Pennsylvania's Liquor Code. It also oversees the operations of the Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board, as well as liquor enforcement, which is managed by the Bureau of Liquor Control Enforcement within the Pennsylvania State Police.
