Extending Health Insurance Assistance

By Congressman Ryan Mackenzie

As I said at my recent town hall, I've been working alongside my colleagues to find commonsense solutions to extend these tax credits and prevent a large premium spike for those buying insurance on Pennie — Pennsylvania's insurance marketplace. As part of that effort, I believe that we should examine ways to increase the efficiency of the program, including by establishing income eligibility caps. This would ensure that taxpayer money only goes to the people who need it, not high-income earners.

Unfortunately, the decision by some Senate Democrats to block a clean, bipartisan funding bill has resulted in a government shutdown. This has brought discussions about these vital tax credits to a halt, making it harder to find solutions that deliver working families the relief that they need. In order to deliver price relief to working families, I'm calling on Senate Democrats to join the bipartisan majority in passing a clean, nonpartisan government funding bill so that we can re-open the government and start delivering solutions on healthcare.

Standing up for Head Start During the Government Shutdown

By Congressman Ryan Mackenzie

This week, I visited PathStone Head Start in Lehighon to hear directly from staff and parents about how the ongoing government shutdown may impact their program and the families they serve. Head Start provides vital early education and support to children across the Lehigh Valley and the Poconos — giving kids the preparation that they need to start school. Unfortunately, Pathstone is at risk of closing its doors for Head Start if they don't receive funding before the end of the month.
