Department of Aging Warns Seniors of Genetic Testing Scam

By Rep. Joe Emrick

NAZARETH - The Pennsylvania Department of Aging is warning seniors, their families and caregivers about a new scam targeting older adults.

Scammers are offering "free" genetic testing, claiming it is covered through Medicare, as a means for the senior to avoid disease or to find the right medications. This is simply an effort to gain access to a senior's personal Medicare information, which can lead to access to financial information and more.

The Administration for Community Living suggests the following tips to avoid being scammed: Do not accept genetic testing services, including a cheek swab, from someone at a community event; always be cautious about giving out your personal information, including your Medicare number; don't accept a genetic testing kit through the mail unless it was ordered by your physician; and always review your Medicare Summary Notice or Explanation of Benefits, watching for words such as "gene analysis" or "molecular pathology."

If you or a loved one have already received a genetic testing cheek swab or screening that was not ordered by a trusted provider, or have any concerns about possible fraud, find and contact your local Senior Medicare Patrol by calling 1-877-808-2468, or going online to <https://www.smpresource.org/>

UGI Supports National Museum of Industrial History's Youth Education Programs

By Glenn Koehler

BETHLEHEM - UGI Utilities, Inc. has made it possible for local students to explore our local and national industrial heritage through a $5,000 contribution to the National Museum of Industrial History. With its diverse collection of more than 200 industrial artifacts, including over 20 artifacts from the Smithsonian Institution's collection, and a variety of oral histories and interactives, NMIH provides a unique educational experience in a sensory rich environment for visiting school students. EITC contributions are vital to the Museum's efforts to inspire the next generation of inventors, innovators and entrepreneurs.

"UGI is a great partner with NMIH, and we are grateful for their support of our mission," said Museum President & CEO Kara Mohsinger, "The number of students we are able to engage with every year depends on our available resources, which makes the support of UGI and our other community partners so important."

"UGI is pleased to make this contribution as part of our commitment to be a good partner and a good neighbor in the communities we serve," Keith Dorman, vice president of communications and community relations, said. "We recognize that the students of today are the workforce and the community leaders of tomorrow, and that preparing young people is critical for success in the future."

UGI provided their support through the Pennsylvania Education Improvement Tax Credit program. As an approved EITC organization, National Museum of Industrial History is eligible to receive EITC contributions from participating businesses.
