Attention Anglers: Do Not Collect Round Gobies as Bait!

By DCNR
 HARRISBURG - Pennsylvania Fish and Boat Commission Aims to Prevent Illicit Bait Bucket Spread of Invasive Crayfish and Round Gobies

The Pennsylvania Fish and Boat Commission and Pennsylvania Sea Grant have developed and posted signs to educate anglers about state regulations regarding the round goby and crayfish species and help prevent bait bucket introductions of these organisms into new uninfested waters.

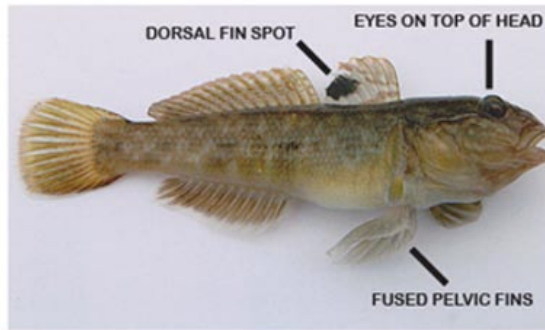

Bait bucket introductions occur when anglers collect bait, transport it to an area where the species is not present, and release them there -- rather than properly disposing of them after fishing.

The signs are posted along waters in western Pennsylvania where round gobies and invasive crayfish species occur.

Invasive crayfish signs alert to the presence of this species at posted waters and emphasize regulations regarding using crayfish as bait -- heads must be removed behind the eyes for all crayfish species unless they're used as bait in the same water from which they were taken.

Signs were posted at Pymatuning Reservoir, Presque Isle Bay, Slippery Rock Creek, and Evergreen Community Park.
