TANNERSVILLE - Lehigh Valley artist wins photography award in Pocono Arts Council's Earth Speaks VI Exhibition

Lehigh Valley-based photographer Glenn Koehler has won the Photography Award in the Pocono Arts Council's The Earth Speaks VI: A Juried Exhibition on the Environmental Crisis. The exhibit, originally slated to be displayed at Northampton Community College's Monroe Campus in the Dunning Art Gallery, has moved to a virtual platform at the Pocono Arts Council's website. "The Earth Speaks is an artist's means of capturing their concern regarding the climate crisis and how it affects our planet, as well as an opportunity to offer possible solutions," the council said in a statement.

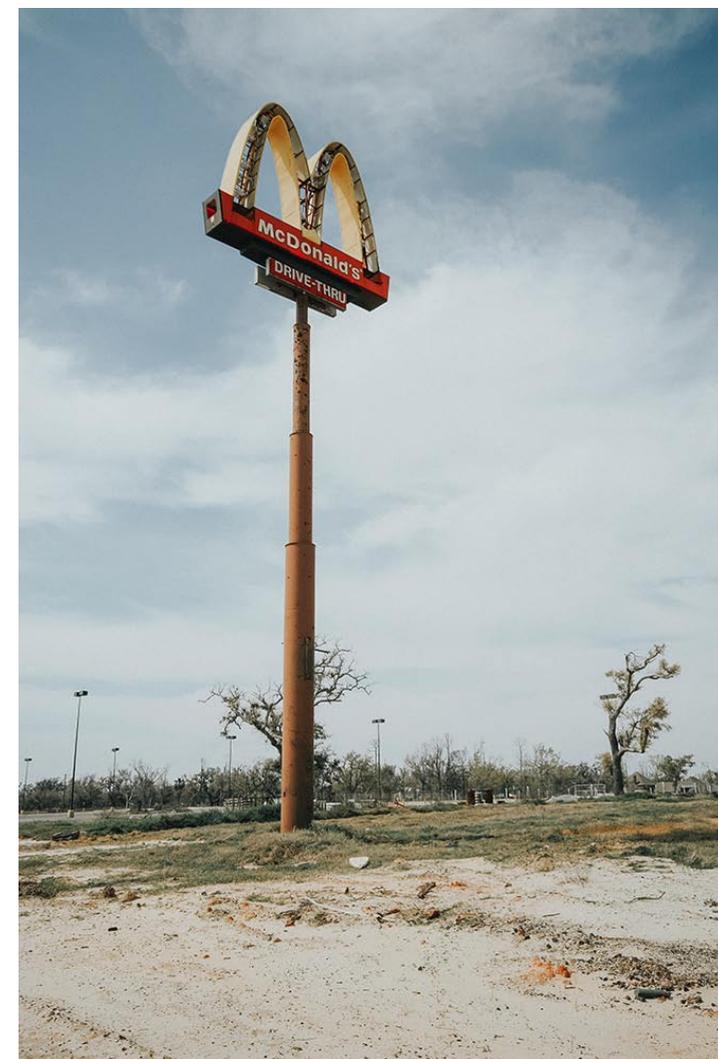

Koehler's award-winning work, Biloxi, Two Years After Katrina, is part of a series spanning the days immediately following Hurricane Katrina through the subsequent rebuilding of a home in the community eighteen months later.

Koehler, then a senior at Saucon Valley High School, was deployed to Mississippi as part of a search and rescue team just days following the storm. He spent a week and a half serving as part of a ground crew going house-to-house in Waveland, MS, considered 'ground zero' of the hurricane. Documenting the ravaged landscape along the way, Koehler's work Old Glory, Hurricane Katrina from this time period was also accepted into the exhibition.

Koehler's award-winning photo depicts a barren landscape and a wind and storm surge-battered McDonald's sign just off the coast in Biloxi, Mississippi, nearly a year and a half following the devastation of Hurricane Katrina in 2005. Serving as part of a group rebuilding homes for residents, he returned to the same areas, capturing the shocking amount of inaction and destruction still evident in the communities long after the storm was gone.

"I'm honored to have my photography, especially some of my earliest work, recognized by the Pocono Arts Council," Koehler said in a statement. "The incredible damage wrought by the hurricane was heartening to see in person. Witnessing it, combined with the principles and ethics raised by my fellow artists in The Earth Speaks, show that humanity has a long way to go towards achieving a sustainable relationship and understanding our role with our planet."

Koehler and his fellow award winners were invited to present and speak on their works virtually in a program that can be viewed at <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=5MzeaqsI-4E>. The Earth Speaks VI exhibit is viewable online and selected works can be purchased at <https://poconoarts.org/gallery/>. The exhibit was juried by Santa Bannon, the founder of the Pennsylvania Museum of Art & Design, and the director of Santa Bannon Fine Art.

More Funding Distributed for Food Assistance

Pennsylvania has received nearly $15 million in funding from the federal government to support charitable food efforts during the pandemic. The funding will not only support the distribution of food through the state's emergency food distribution network, but also ease the additional burdens of transporting, storing and delivering products.

Website Helps Pennsylvanians Support Local Restaurants

The COVID-19 pandemic forced many restaurants to make drastic changes in operations, including temporarily eliminating dine-in options. A new website helps Pennsylvanians support their local restaurants by providing a list of takeout, curbside and delivery services operating during the public health emergency.

The Pennsylvania Restaurant and Lodging Association developed the new CarryoutPA website to serve as a resource to connect community residents with dine-out options in their area.

Restaurant owners who would like to be featured on the new site can enter their business information at www.carryoutpa.com/join-now/.
