

National Museum Of Industrial Hosting Events To Honor The Iconic Legacy Of Martin Tower

By Glenn Koehler
 BETHLEHEM, PA - The National Museum of Industrial History (NMIH) is honoring nearly 50 years since the groundbreaking of Martin Tower prior to its implosion later this month by offering up a series of rare looks at the construction and subsequent years of one of the most iconic buildings in the region.

From 4pm to 8pm during the SouthSide Arts District's First Friday event on May 3rd, NMIH will be running a special slideshow titled 'Building an Icon.' This free event will feature hundreds of rare and never-before-seen photographs chronicling the building from its groundbreaking on August 25, 1969 to its days in operation throughout the 1970s and 1980s. During the event the museum will also be offering reduced $5 admission to the full museum.

On May 11th at 2pm the museum will host special guest speaker Gordon Baker for a lecture about the "Unique Birth of Martin Tower." A retired licensed professional engineer, Mr. Baker helped develop and implement a computerized system that produced the drawings needed to fabricate Martin Tower's beams and columns, and later supervised the fabrication of the tower's steel. This event included in regular museum admission and free to members.

About the National Museum of Industrial History
 The mission of the National Museum of Industrial History, in affiliation with the Smithsonian Institution, is to forge a connection between America's industrial past and the innovations of today by educating the public and inspiring the visionaries of tomorrow. NMIH's vision is to develop a premiere history museum which will tell the story of America's industrial achievements and the accomplishments of its workers, innovators, and entrepreneurs. For more information on NMIH visit www.nmih.org
