

Hazards forum at Nurture Nature Center September 26

By Rachel Hogan

EASTON - On September 10, we brought Joe Miketta (Meteorologist-in-Charge) and Ray Krudzlo (Senior Service Hydrologist) from the Mt. Holly, NJ/Philadelphia, PA National Weather Service Weather Forecast Office to NNC to deliver informational presentations about their forecast tools and resources. It was a great chance for local people, including emergency and water resource professionals, growers, recreation organizers as well as residents, to meet them and learn how use their various forecast services and can communicate better with them during extreme events.

The event was developed at a request from emergency managers in area municipalities for improved coordination with the local NWS office.

On September 26, from 6 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. we will be hosting a major community forum and public exhibit about hazards and resilience, with a keynote speaker from NOAA who will address climate and risk in our region, and help us start thinking about mitigation.

This event is designed for community leaders and residents from Easton, Wilson and Bangor Area School Districts. After the keynote participants will engage in facilitated discussion, and will also have a chance to take in a large exhibit of local hazard stories ranging from the flood of 55 to invasive species at area vineyards – these will be local names and voices from the three sending districts, who have been interviewed by our area high school ambassadors.

This important event will help shape the second year of NNC's CREATE Resilience project, which is focused on learning about mitigation strategies. RSVPs for this event are required, and participants will be paid $40 for their time, per a new NOAA Office of Education recommendation designed to value community input into resilience thinking at the local level. <https://www.facebook.com/events/877662255949411/>.

Fighting Back Against Spotted Lanternfly

By Rep. Joe Emrick

BANGOR - Recognizing the devastating impact the ongoing spread of spotted lanternfly could have on key sectors of the state's agriculture industry, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture is again inviting students to help spread the word about this threat.

For the second year in a row, first-through eighth-grade students are being invited to submit entries in a calendar contest designed to educate people about this invasive insect that was first identified in Berks County but has since spread to more than a dozen counties in the eastern and central regions of the state. Spotted lanternfly could be devastating to the state's grape, hops and hardwoods industries.

All entries must include one fact about spotted lanternfly with artwork created by the student in an 11-by-17-inch, horizontal poster format. A completed contest submission form must be attached or emailed with each entry. All entries must be original artwork; no copies will be accepted.

More than 800 entries were received for the 2018 calendar contest. This year's competition runs through Oct. 31.
